Our Latest Longest War

Losing Hearts and Minds in Afghanistan

Edited by Aaron B. O'Connell

“A measured and clear-eyed look at the deeply rooted challenges embedded in the ongoing effort to achieve a stable and successful outcome in Afghanistan—many of which are of our own making through inattention to the history and culture of this complex nation.”—Admiral James Stavridis, USN (Ret), Supreme Allied Commander at NATO 2009–2013

“A unique collection of essays, written by those who actually implemented Afghanistan policy in the field, not by the senior government officials halfway around the world in Washington.”—Karl W. Eikenberry, ambassador and Lieutenant General, retired, US Army, Stanford University

The Insane and the Melancholy

Ece Temelkuran

Translated by Zeynep Beler

“Part memoir, part historical rumination, part jeremiad against the current government, Temelkuran's book is an attempt to come to grips with her ‘troubled, ill-fated and perplexing country’ and its ‘great, long madness.’ The portrait she paints is uncomplimentary but loving; its harshness is born of honest observation and heartfelt concern.”—Bookforum

“Temelkuran could not have predicted these events, but she has nonetheless written a primer for today's chaos, a masterclass in expecting the unexpected.”—Financial Times

The PKK

Coming Down from the Mountains

Paul White

The Kurdistan Workers' Party, known as the PKK, is infamous for its extreme violence. The struggle it has waged for Kurdish independence in southeastern Turkey has taken an excess of 40,000 lives. Less known is the fact that the PKK now embraces a nonviolent end to the conflict. This book charts the ideological evolution of the PKK, as well as its origins, aims and organizational setup. Paul White provides the only authoritative and up-to-date analysis of one of the most important non-state political players in the contemporary Middle East.

Neoliberal Apartheid

Palestine/Israel and South Africa after 1994

Andy Clarno

“Clarno undermines the popular misconception that Israel/Palestine and South Africa took divergent paths in the 1990s, with the latter becoming a model of post-racial freedom and equality. Instead, as he persuasively explains, the experiences and standards of living of poor Palestinians and poor Blacks in South Africa are similarly precarious and vulnerable to violence and marginalization.”—Lisa Hajjar, author of Torture

Power Shift

On the New Global Order

Richard Falk

“For almost half a century, in classics such as This Endangered Planet and A Study of Future Worlds, Falk has brought powerful moral and legal insights to debates about order and justice in world politics. In this collection of essays, he argues that the international system is in the midst of a protracted, perilous, but ultimately progressive movement from what he calls ‘the old geopolitics’ to ‘a new geopolitics.’”—Foreign Affairs

Power Politics

How China and Russia Reshape the World

Rob de Wijk

Offering analyses of such actions as Putin’s annexation of the Crimea and China’s attempts to claim large parts of the South China Sea, de Wijk explains why power politics never truly went away.

“Outlines a new realism for our age, one based on geoeconomics and geopolitical fault lines. . . .

If Wijk is right, failure of the trans-Atlantic and trans-Pacific trade pacts will seriously diminish US leadership in a fragmented world.”—Choice

Being Red

A Politics for the Future

Ken Livingstone

Ken Livingstone provides a fascinating insider’s account of the Party at this pivotal moment in its history. Being Red takes us from the self-proclaimed radical socialism of the Greater London Council; to Livingstone’s controversial independent candidacy; to a head-to-head with Boris Johnson; to the political battles against privatization and pollution which characterized his time as mayor of London.

Today We Drop Bombs, Tomorrow We Build Bridges

How Foreign Aid Became a Casualty of War

Peter Gill

"Gill shows with shocking clarity that a lack of neutrality on the part of aid organizations is giving rise to 'A fateful confusion . . . between Western military boots on the ground and Western aid workers.'"—Times Literary Supplement

"Gill argues that the loss of neutrality as a principle of humanitarian aid has been devastating for those caught in the crossfire of the war on terror."—Publishers Weekly

Health Divides

Where You Live Can Kill You

Clare Bamba

With a Foreword by Danny Dorling

"Inequality . . . is nothing to do with the poor being a hopeless underclass, destined for extinction in a Darwinian world where only the fittest survive. As Bamba . . . spells out, it has everything to do with factors such as poor housing, poor nutrition, and lack of educational and employment opportunities."—Times Higher Education

The Crises of Microcredit

Edited by Isabelle Guérin, Marc Labie, and Jean-Michel Servet

"The editors . . . call for a new vision of microcredit: one that sees finance and money as 'commons' rather than as externally owned capital. They note that in many historical cases grassroots social movements have managed to improve their lot by founding their own institutions—mutuals and cooperatives—to provide finance locally within a framework of solidarity."—LSE Review of Books

Economics After Capitalism

A Guide to the Ruins and a Road to the Future

Derek Wall

With a Foreword by David Bollier

From the time it was uttered by Margaret Thatcher in the 1980s, “There is no alternative” has been the unofficial mantra of the neoliberal order. But as Derek Wall argues there is in fact an alternative to our crisis-ridden, austerity-inflicted world—and not just one alternative, but many.

The Political Origins of Inequality

Why a More Equal World Is Better for Us All

Simon Reid-Henry

“[According to Reid-Henry] we need a politics that prioritises social prosperity over economic growth. We need to reinvent the social democratic project ‘at home and abroad’—including a global institutional system to mediate effectively between existing public and international law. We must do the hard work of ‘joining up the dots . . . of a far too patchy, far too easily manipulated institutional framework that governs the lives of the rich and poor.’”—Times Higher Education

Banking on Words

The Failure of Language in the Age of Derivative Finance

Arjun Appadurai

“When Appadurai writes about derivatives, it becomes an exploration of the vast shadow effect of this now-familiar instrument.
