   Journals Program
At Michigan Publishing, open access (OA) is one of many ways that we strive to deliver the best scholarship to the broadest possible audience. Over the last decade, Michigan Publishing has been taking steps to develop a publishing program that better aligns with our mission and commitment to diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility.

What is Open Access?

Open Access refers to freely available, digital, online information. Open access content is free of charge and usually carries less restrictive copyright and licensing barriers than traditionally published works. Simply put, open access means availability to all.

Open Access at UMP

With over 250 OA publications and the continued development of the Fulcrum platform, we take pride in helping further faculty public engagement and transforming existing systems for the dissemination of knowledge to be more equitable. Michigan Publishing continues to engage with practical challenges such as contract terms, discoverability, and sustainability so that open access works for the benefit of all of our users: authors, researchers, libraries, students, and readers around the world.

While OA has become an established approach with journals, academic monographs are an evolving form and the paths to sustainability are still being established. The University of Michigan Press has partnered with LYRASIS to develop a model that works toward a more sustainable, open future while also inspiring other nonprofit publishers to do the same.

Fund to Mission: The Press’s Open Access Monograph Model

The Press is transitioning to an OA monograph model termed “Fund to Mission.” Fund to Mission demonstrates a return to the origins of the university press movement and moves toward a more sustainable infrastructure for the humanities and social sciences.

With this model, the Press aims to convert at least 75% of its monographs to open access by the end of 2023, without any author ever having to pay. The Press is working to build a sustainable model by achieving stable funding for this monograph program from three sources: annual funding from the library community, additional recurring funds from U-M, and other funder payments. To date, we have the support of several libraries and consortia and look to continue expanding our community of supporters. You can read more about this model on page 38 of the catalog.

The Press is excited by the emerging energy and opportunities around open access. We are committed to furthering our mission and to be transparent about our transition to an open publishing program. We encourage you to follow our journey at press.umich.edu/librarians.
Made-Up Asians
Yellowface During the Exclusion Era
Esther Kim Lee

Explores the history of misrepresentations of Asian characters on stage and screen

Made-Up Asians traces the history of yellowface, the theatrical convention of non-Asian actors putting on makeup and costume to look East Asian. Using specific case studies from European and U.S. theater, race science, and early film, Esther Kim Lee traces the development of yellowface in the U.S. context during the Exclusion Era (1862–1940), when Asians faced legal and cultural exclusion from immigration and citizenship. These caricatured, distorted, and misrepresented versions of Asians took the place of excluded Asians on theatrical stages and cinema screens. The book examines a wide-ranging set of primary sources, including makeup guidebooks, play catalogs, advertisements, biographies, and backstage anecdotes, providing new ways of understanding and categorizing yellowface as theatrical practice and historical subject. Made-Up Asians also shows how lingering effects of Asian exclusionary laws can still be seen in yellowface performances, casting practices, and anti-Asian violence into the 21st century.

Esther Kim Lee is Professor of Theater Studies at Duke University.

“An extraordinary, much-needed history of yellowface, focusing on its English origins through usage in classical Hollywood. .. Like the author, I hope that this book will teach readers about yellowface and inspire them to take anti-racist action.”

Queer Voices in Hip Hop
Cultures, Communities, and Contemporary Performance
Lauron J. Kehrer

Positions queer and trans hip hop within the longer tradition of Black queer music

Notions of hip hop authenticity, as expressed both within hip hop communities and in the larger American culture, rely on the construction of the rapper as a Black, masculine, heterosexual, cisgender man who enacts a narrative of struggle and success. In Queer Voices in Hip Hop, Lauron J. Kehrer turns our attention to openly queer and trans rappers and positions them within a longer Black queer musical lineage. Combining musical, textual, and visual analysis with reception history, this book reclaims queer involvement in hip hop by tracing the genre’s beginnings within Black and Latinx queer music-making practices and spaces, demonstrating that queer and trans rappers draw on Ballroom and other cultural expressions particular to queer and trans communities of color in order to articulate their subject positions. By centering the performances of openly queer and trans artists of color, Queer Voices in Hip Hop reclaims their work as essential to the development and persistence of hip hop in the United States as it tells the story of the queer roots of hip hop.

Lauron J. Kehrer is Assistant Professor of Ethnomusicology and Musicology at Western Michigan University.

African Students in East Germany, 1949–1975
Sara Pugach

The lived experiences of African students in communist East Germany

This book explores the largely unexamined history of Africans who lived, studied, and worked in the German Democratic Republic. African students started coming to the East in 1951 as invited guests who were offered scholarships by the East German government to prepare them for primarily technical and scientific careers once they returned home to their own countries. Drawn from previously unexplored archives, African Students in East Germany, 1949–1975 uncovers individual stories and reconstructs the pathways that African students took in their journeys to the GDR and what happened once they got there.

Sara Pugach is Professor of History at California State University, Los Angeles.

Marginal People in Deviant Places
Ethnography, Difference, and the Challenge to Scientific Racism
Janice M. Irvine

How twentieth-century ethnographers captured the diverse social worlds of outsiders

Marginal People in Deviant Places revisits early- to mid-twentieth-century ethnographic studies, arguing that their focus on marginal subcultures—ranging from American hobos, to men who have sex with other men in St. Louis bathrooms, to hippies, to taxi dancers in Chicago, to elderly Jews in Venice, California—helped produce new ways of thinking about social difference more broadly in the United States. Irvine demonstrates how the social scientists who told the stories of these marginalized groups represented an early challenge to then-dominant narratives of scientific racism, prefiguring the academic fields of gender, ethnic, sexuality, and queer studies in key ways. In recounting the social histories of certain American outsiders, Irvine identifies an American paradox by which social differences are both despised and desired, and she describes the rise of an outsider capitalism that integrates difference into American society by marketing it.

Janice M. Irvine is Professor of Sociology at the University of Massachusetts Amherst.

“Marginal People in Deviant Places is a wonderful, smart, and multidimensional cultural history of the twentieth century through the eyes of marginalized populations, and a thorough consideration of the contributions of scholars of deviance.”

Tales of Dionysus

The Dionysiaca of Nonnus of Panopolis
Edited by William Levitan and Stanley Lombardo
With an Introduction by Gordon Braden

The first English verse translation of the Dionysiaca of Nonnus of Panopolis

Tales of Dionysus is the first English verse translation of one of the most extraordinary poems of the Greek literary tradition, the Dionysiaca of Nonnus of Panopolis. By any standard, the Dionysiaca is a formidable work. It is by far the longest poem surviving from the classical world, a massive mythological epic stretching to over 20,000 lines, written in the tradition of Homer, using Homer’s verse, Homer’s language, his narrative turns and motifs, and invoking his ancient Muses. But it is also the last ancient epic to follow a Homeric model, composed so late in fact that it stands as close in time to the Renaissance as it does to archaic Greece. Out of its formal epic frame spills a tumult of ancient literary types: tragedy, elegy, didactic, panegyric, pastoral idyll, and the novel are all parts of this gigantic enterprise, each genre coming to the fore one after the other.

William Levitan is Professor of Classics Emeritus at Grand Valley State University. Stanley Lombardo is Professor Emeritus of Classics at The University of Kansas.

“This innovative translation also offers a renewed vision of Nonnus’ very innovative work. It may also open late Greek poetry to a larger audience.”

Still a Hollow Hope
State Power and the Second Amendment
Anthony D. Cooling

How states determine the role of the second amendment

The U.S. Supreme Court increasingly matters in American political life. People across the political spectrum look to the Court for relief from policies they oppose, while simultaneously hoping the Court will advance the policy agendas they believe in. However, the Court and the courts are, in reality, more of a sideshow to the culture war than stars of its center ring. While court decisions, especially Supreme Court decisions, are important, the decisions emanating from the Court reflect social, cultural, and political change that occurred long before the judges’ ruling. Courts are not powerless institutions. But reformers will not have success in the courts unless supported by the elected branches and by public opinion. In this insightful book that examines the relationship between state power and the Second Amendment, Anthony D. Cooling argues specifically that preexisting state culture is a key factor in the power that courts have to influence laws.

Anthony D. Cooling is a Budget and Revenue Officer with the City of Decatur, IL.

Empire and Environment

Ecological Ruin in the Transpacific
Edited by Jeffrey Santa Ana, Heidi Amin-Hong, Rina Garcia Chua, Zhou Xiaojing, Editors

Environmental violence and recovery in transpacific cultural expressions

Empire and Environment argues that histories of imperialism, colonialism, militarism, and global capitalism are integral to understanding environmental violence in the transpacific region. The collection draws its rationale from the imbrication of imperialism and global environmental crisis, but its inspiration from the ecological work of activists, artists, and intellectuals across the transpacific region. Taking a postcolonial, ecocritical approach to confronting ecological crises and environmental catastrophes on a global scale, the collection demonstrates how Asian North American, Asian diasporic, and Indigenous Pacific Island cultural expressions critique a de-historicized sense of place, attachment, and belonging.

Jeffrey Santa Ana is Associate Professor of English at Stony Brook University. Heidi Amin-Hong is Assistant Professor of English at University of California, Santa Barbara. Rina Garcia Chua is a PhD IGS Candidate at the University of British Columbia Okanagan. Zhou Xiaojing is Professor of English at the University of the Pacific.

“Empire and Environment speaks to the urgency of the contemporary political moment and to the long histories of militarization, empire, and extraction that continue to shape transpacific ecologies . . . This is an outstanding, important collection.”

Queer Subjects in Modern Japanese Literature: Male Love, Intimacy, and Erotics, 1886–2014 is an anthology of translated Japanese literature about men behaving lovingly, erotically, and intimately with other men. Covering more than 125 years of modern and contemporary Japanese history, this book aims to introduce a diverse array of authors to an English-speaking audience and provide further context for their works. While no anthology can comprehensively represent queer Japanese literature, these selections nonetheless expand our understanding of queerness in Japanese culture.

A Beat Beyond
Selected Prose of Major Jackson
Edited by Amor Kohli

The art of poetry and the poetry of mythmaking

In this collection of essays, interviews, and notes, Major Jackson revels in the work of poetry not only to limn and assess the intellectual and spiritual dimensions of poets, but to amplify the controversies and inner conflicts that define our age: political unrest, climate crises, the fallout from bewildering traumas, and the social function of the art of poetry itself. Accessible and critically minded, Jackson returns to the poem as an unparalleled source of linguistic pleasure that structures a multilayered “lyric self.”

Major Jackson is Professor of English, Director of Creative Writing, and Gertrude Conaway Vanderbilt Chair in the Humanities at Vanderbilt University. Amor Kohli is Associate Professor and Chair of the Department of African and Black Diaspora Studies at DePaul University.

“Through expertly crafted and engaging essays, talks, reviews, and even liner notes, Jackson lyrically demonstrates his expansive intellect and how ‘poetry conveys the richness of living in the music of ourselves.’”

From the Valley of Bronze Camels
A Primer, Some Lectures, & A Boondoggle on Poetry
Jane Miller

“What makes art ‘modern’ and what does ‘urgent’ mean now?”

Jane Miller loves poetry. In these provocative and deeply insightful essays, Jane Miller unpacks the work of poetry giants Adrienne Rich, Paul Celan, Marina Tsvetaeva, Osip Mandelstam, and Federico García Lorca alongside the painters Caravaggio and Paul Klee, as well as ancient Chinese music and techniques of the contemporary poem. This masterful work can be read as advice to a young writer, but it also invites us into the mind of a writer who has developed her craft through the course of a lifetime of writing, reading, and exploring the world, showing not only the ideas that influenced her—feminist, lesbian, and international works—but also how Miller has, in turn, influenced ideas.

Jane Miller is a poet and essayist. She lives in Tucson, Arizona, with artist Valyntina Grenier.

Essays and Exhortations
Robert Cohen

The art of fiction, uncaged

In this funny and perceptive collection, novelist and essayist Robert Cohen shares his thoughts on the writing process and then puts these prescriptions into practice—from how to rant effectively as an essayist and novelist (“The Piano Has Been Drinking”), how to achieve your own style, naming characters (and creating them), and how one manages one’s own identity with being “a writer” in time and space, to the use of reference and allusion in one’s work. Rooted in his own experiences, this collection of essays shows readers how to use their influences and experiences to create bold, personal, and individual work.

Robert Cohen is a widely-published novelist, short story writer, and essayist. He teaches at Middlebury College.

“What a master class this is—not only about the art of writing, but also about the glorious, messy, hilarious, soul-stirring, lifelong practice of being a writer. In these essays, Robert Cohen is both incisive and fearless. Anyone interested in writing seriously needs to read this book.”

Minor Salvage

The Korean War and Korean American Life Writings

Stephen Hong Sohn

Forgotten archives and life writings of Korean War refugees

The Korean War, often invoked in American culture as “the forgotten war,” remains ongoing. Though active fighting only occurred between 1950 and 1953, the signing of an armistice resulted in an infamous stalemate and the construction of the Korean Peninsula’s Demilitarized Zone. Minor Salvage reads early Korean American life writings in order to explore the admittedly partial ways in which those made precarious by war seek to rebuild their lives.

A new framework for understanding ethnic and racial difference in Korea

This collection brings together leading and emerging scholars of multiculturalism in Korean media culture to examine mediated constructions of the “other,” taking into account the nation’s postcolonial and neocolonial relationships and its mediated construction of self. The collection points to the construction of racial others that elevates, tolerates, and incorporates difference; the construction of valued and devalued ethnic others; and the ambivalent construction of co-ethnic others as sympathetic victims or marginalized threats.

Hu Shih’s Political Writings
Chih-p’ing Chou and Carlos Yu-Kai Lin, Editors

Previously unpublished works from one of China’s most important scholars

Dr. Hu Shih (1891–1962) was one of China’s top scholars and diplomats and served as the Republic of China’s ambassador to the United States during World War II. In the 1950s, Hu Shih started to analyze the development and nature of Communism, delivering a series of lectures and addresses to reveal what he called Stalin’s “grand strategy” for facilitating the International Communist Movement. This volume brings together a collection of Hu Shih’s most important, English-language speeches, interviews, and commentaries on international politics, and China-U.S. relations.

Chih-p’ing Chou is Professor Emeritus of East Asian Studies at Princeton University. Carlos Yu-Kai Lin is Assistant Professor of Linguistics and Translation at the City University of Hong Kong.

Righteous Revolutionaries
Morality, Mobilization, and Violence in the Making of the Chinese State
Jeffrey A. Javed

A reexamination of one of the most violent and successful state-building efforts in history

Righteous Revolutionaries illustrates how states appeal to popular morality to forge new group identities and mobilize violence against perceived threats to their authority. Using an array of novel archival, documentary, and quantitative historical data, this book illustrates that China’s land reform campaign in the early 1950s was not just about economic redistribution but rather part of a larger, brutally violent state-building effort to delegitimize the new party-state’s internal rivals and establish its moral authority.

Jeffrey A. Javed is a former postdoctoral fellow at the Lieberthal-Rogel Center for Chinese Studies and the Weiser Center for Emerging Democracies at the University of Michigan.

How the history of the blind in Japan challenges contemporary notions of disability

While the loss of sight—whether in early modern Japan or now—may be understood as a disability, blind people in the Tokugawa period (1600–1868) could thrive because of disability. The blind of the era were prominent across a wide range of professions, and through a strong guild structure were able to exert contractual monopolies over certain trades. Blind in Early Modern Japan illustrates the breadth and depth of those occupations, the power and respect that accrued to the guild members, and the lasting legacy of the Tokugawa guilds into the current moment.

Yosano Akiko (1878–1942) has long been recognized as one of the most important literary figures of prewar Japan. The Tale of Genji provided Akiko with her conception of herself as a writer and inspired many of her most significant literary projects. She, in turn, refurbished the tale as a modern novel, pioneered some of the most promising avenues of modern academic research on Genji, and, to a great extent, gave the text the prominence it now enjoys as a translated classic. This study traces for the first time the full range of Akiko’s involvement with The Tale of Genji.

The Apocalypse in Reformation Nuremberg

Jews and Turks in Andreas Osiander’s World

Andrew L. Thomas

How Jews and Turks impacted influential reformer Andreas Osiander

Lutheran preacher and theologian Andreas Osiander (1498–1552) played a critical role in spreading the Lutheran Reformation in sixteenth-century Nuremberg. The Apocalypse in Reformation Nuremberg: Jews and Turks in Andreas Osiander’s World is the first book in any language to concentrate on his attitudes toward both Jews and Turks, and it presents the first published English translation of Osiander’s famous treatise in defense of Jews against blood libel. Osiander’s writings on Jews and Turks also provide a valuable mirror to reflect on the historical antecedents to modern antisemitism and Islamophobia and thus elucidate how the related stereotypes and prejudices are both perpetuated and overcome.

Andrew L. Thomas is Associate Professor of History at Salem College.

Evading the Patronage Trap

Interest Representation in Mexico

Brian Palmer-Rubin

Patronage as ruination for small farms and businesses

Why have Latin American democracies proven unable to confront structural inequalities? Brian Palmer-Rubin contends that we may lay the blame on these countries’ systems of interest representation, which exhibit “biased pluralism,” a system in which the demands of organizations representing economic elites predominate. A more inclusive model of representation would require a more encompassing and empowered set of institutions to represent workers, and would also feature spaces for non-elite producers such as farmers and small-business owners to have a say in sectoral economic policies.

Brian Palmer-Rubin is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Marquette University.

Noa Hazan

The visual representation of racial thought

Analyzing the visual syntax and display rhetoric applied in newspaper photos, national historical albums, and museum exhibitions, Noa Hazan shows that although racial thought was and still is verbally suppressed in Israel, it is vividly present in its nonverbal official and public visual sphere. In the Israeli case, the behavior and manners of Mizrahim were understood as an outcome of the primitive Arab cultures they grow up in. Engraved in their body, these cultural traits were depicted and understood as racial-biological qualities and were visually manipulated to silo Ashkenazim and Mizrahim in Israel as distinct racial types.

Noa Hazan is Assistant Professor of Classical, Middle Eastern, and Asian Languages and Cultures at Queens College of the City University of New York.

Prosperity, Almighty God, and Lives in Motion in a Malian Provincial Town
André Chappatte

The lives of young male Muslim “adventurers” in a Malian town

This monograph of Muslim life focuses on young male migrants of rural origin who move to build better lives in Bougouni, a provincial town in southwest Mali. Describing themselves as “simply Muslims” and “adventurers,” these migrants aim to be both prosperous and good Muslims. Drawing on seventeen months of fieldwork, author André Chappatte explores their sense of prosperity and piety in what they call “tunga” (adventure), a customary search for money and more dating from the colonial period.

André Chappatte is Assistant Professor at the Global Studies Institute, University of Geneva.
In Power/Knowledge/Land, author Laura German profiles the consolidation of a global knowledge regime surrounding land and its governance within international development circles following the outcry over “global land grabs,” and the growing enrollment of previously antagonistic actors within it. Drawing theoretical insights from ontological anthropology and decolonial theory and deploying pioneering analytical techniques inspired by the politics of knowledge, German reveals the inner mechanics of a global knowledge regime that has enabled the longstanding project of commodifying customary land to be advanced by capturing the energies of socially progressive forces.

Laura A. German is Professor in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Georgia.

_Return Migration after Violent Conflict_

Sandra F. Joireman

_A bottom-up analysis of what refugees need_

Growing numbers of people are displaced by war and violent conflict. In Afghanistan, Ethiopia, Myanmar, Syria, and elsewhere violence pushes civilian populations from their homes and sometimes from their countries. In previous decades, millions of refugees and displaced people returned to their place of origin after conflict or were resettled in countries in the Global North. Now displacements last longer, the number of people returning home is lower, and opportunities for resettlement are shrinking.

Using case studies and first-person accounts from interviews and fieldwork in post-conflict settings such as Uganda, Liberia, and Kosovo, Sandra F. Joireman highlights the divergence between these policies and the preferences of conflict-displaced people. Rather than looking from the top down, at the rights that people have in international and domestic law, the perspective of this text is from the ground up—examining individual and household choices after conflict.

While Waiting for Rain
Community, Economy, and Law in a Time of Change
John Henry Schlegel

How innovation will save the United States—and Buffalo—from economic decline

While Waiting for Rain examines the legal and economic histories of the United States and the city of Buffalo, an appropriate stand-in for any city that may have seen its economy start to fall apart in the 1960s, ’70s, and ’80s. The book builds on the work of urbanist Jane Jacobs, which emphasizes the importance of local innovation for economic growth. As John Henry Schlegel shows in this sophisticated and riveting analysis, both Buffalo and the United States as a whole must focus on developing strong communities rather than continuing in failing policies of economic development.

John Henry Schlegel is UB Distinguished Professor of Law and Floyd M. and Hilda L. Hurst Faculty Scholar at the University of Buffalo School of Law.

Coalition Politics and Foreign Policy in Europe

Sibel Oktay

Brings political parties back to the study of foreign policy

Building on the rich literature in political science on coalitions, legislatures, and voting behavior, the book weaves together sophisticated statistical analyses of foreign policy events across thirty European countries alongside in-depth case studies from Denmark, the Netherlands, and Finland. It brings political parties back into the study of foreign policy, demonstrating that the size of the coalition, the ideological proximity of the governing parties, and their relationship with the parliamentary opposition together influence the government’s ability to act in the international arena.

Sibel Oktay is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Illinois, Springfield and Nonresident Senior Fellow of Public Opinion and Foreign Policy at the Chicago Council on Global Affairs.

Mirsad Kriještorac

Understanding the relationship between nationalism and identity

First Nationalism Then Identity focuses on the case of Bosnian Muslims, a rare historic instance of a new nation emerging. Although for Bosnian Muslims the process of national emergence and the assertion of a new salient identity have been going on for over two decades, Mirsad Kriještorac is the first to explain the significance of the whole process and how the adoption of their new Bosniak identity occurred.

International Security in a World of Fragile States
Islamic States and Islamist Organizations
S. Yaqub Ibrahimi

Fragile states are laboratories for Islamist terror groups

Following the 9/11 attacks on New York and Washington, DC, there has been an increasing interest among scholars, students, and the interested public to study and learn about the Islamist-oriented terrorist organizations called Jihadi Salafi Groups (JSGs). Considering that these organizations emerged in highly fragile states, S. Yaqub Ibrahimi asks: how and why is state fragility linked to the emergence of JSGs?

Complex Rivalry

The Dynamics of India-Pakistan Conflict

Surinder Mohan

A new model to understand the India–Pakistan rivalry

This book, through an examination of fifty-seven militarized disputes between 1947 and 2020, explains the life-cycle of India-Pakistan rivalry in four phases: initiation; development; maintenance; and a possible transformation/termination. To break this deadlock and mitigate their longstanding differences, Mohan proposes that India and Pakistan must reframe their national priorities and political goals so that the new situation or combinations of conditions would assist their peace strategists to downgrade the dyadic hostility and implement risky policies to make headway to a promising transformation.

Surinder Mohan is Assistant Professor in the Department of Strategic and Regional Studies at the University of Jammu in India.
India as Kingmaker
Status Quo or Revisionist Power
Michael O. Slobodchikoff and Aakriti A. Tandon

Predicting India’s future global influence

As India finds itself in the enviable position of kingmaker, both the status quo and revisionist major powers are jockeying for India’s support for either upholding or revising the current world order. Using India’s bilateral treaties as a proxy measure of the strength of its relationship with other major powers, Slobodchikoff and Tandon determine whether India will remain neutral in its foreign policy approach or adopt a more assertive role in shaping the future global order.

Radicalization in Theory and Practice
Understanding Religious Violence in Western Europe
Thierry Balzacq and Elyamine Settoul, Editors

What conditions under religious radicalization lead to violent action

Radicalization in Theory and Practice identifies the mechanisms that explicitly link radical religious beliefs and radical actions. It describes its nature, singles out the mechanisms that enable radicalism to produce its effects, and develops a conceptual architecture to help scholars and policymakers to address and evaluate radicalism—or what often passes as such.

Thierry Balzacq is Professor of Political Science and Professorial Fellow at Sciences Po, Paris. Elyamine Settoul is Associate Professor at CNAM, Paris.
Conspiracy Theories and the Failure of Intellectual Critique
Kurtis Hagen

The value of viewing conspiracy theories as individuals rather than a monolith

Conspiracy Theories and the Failure of Intellectual Critique argues that conspiracy theories, including those that conflict with official accounts and suggest that prominent people in Western democracies have engaged in appalling behavior, should be taken seriously and examined on a case-by-case basis. It builds on the philosophical work on this topic that has developed over the past quarter century, challenging some of it, but affirming the emerging consensus: each conspiracy theory ought to be judged on its particular merits and faults.

Kurtis Hagen is an independent scholar and former Associate Professor of Philosophy at SUNY Plattsburgh.

Creating Chaos Online
Disinformation and Subverted Post-Publics
Asta Zelenkauskaite

Unmasking disinformation propagated by Russian trolling

Through a dystopian vision of publics that are expected to navigate in the uncertain sea of authentic and orchestrated content that is pushed by human and nonhuman actors, Creating Chaos Online argues for a concept of post-publics. Post-publics is reflected within the continuum of treatment of public, counter public, and anti-public. This book argues that affect-instilled arguments used in public deliberation in times of uncertainty, along with whataboutism, constitute a playbook for chaos online.

Asta Zelenkauskaite is Associate Professor of Communication at Drexel University.

“This is a comprehensive analysis of Russian trolling and disinformation. Zelenkauskaite explains the aims, scope, strategy, tactics, rhetoric, policies, and mechanics of Russian trolling in the most exhaustive, comprehensive, and empirically-rooted treatment of this subject that I have seen.”

The Politics of Bad Governance in Contemporary Russia
Vladimir Gel’man

Human history is in reality a history of corrupt governments

In this book, Vladimir Gel’man considers bad governance as a distinctive politico-economic order that is based on a set of formal and informal rules, norms, and practices quite different from those of good governance. Using an analysis of case studies of political and policy changes in Russia after the Soviet collapse, Gel’man discusses the logic of the building and maintenance of politico-economic order of bad governance in Russia and paths of its possible transformation in a theoretical and comparative perspective.

Vladimir Gel’man is Professor at the European University at St. Petersburg and University of Helsinki.

Twenty-First Century Military Innovation
Technological, Organizational, and Strategic Change beyond Conventional War
Marcus Schulzke

How the military actively reengineers for success on and off the battlefield

Contemporary war is as much a quest for decisive technological, organizational, and doctrinal superiority before the fighting starts as it is an effort to destroy enemy militaries during battle. Armed forces that are not actively fighting are instead actively reengineering themselves for success in the next fight and imagining what that next fight may look like. Twenty-First Century Military Innovation outlines the most theoretically important themes in contemporary warfare, especially as these appear in distinctive innovations that signal changes in states’ warfighting capacities and their political goals.

The Politics of Tepid Transitions to Renewable Energy
Oksan Bayulgen

Political barriers to clean energy transitions

This book focuses on the political determinants of clean energy transitions, especially in developing country settings, which most of the literature has overlooked. Using an in-depth case study of energy policymaking in Turkey, Bayulgen constructs a dynamic, multidimensional theoretical model to explain the political feasibility of energy solutions to climate change in much of the world. By using Turkey as a case study, she clearly shows the role of the state and elites in energy policies that have failed to make the transition to renewables.

Rationality of Irrationality
Political Determinants and Effects of Party Position Blurring
Kyung Joon Han

How ambiguous party positions distract voters

Rationality of Irrationality argues that political parties are motivated to strategically blur their position on an issue when they struggle with a certain disadvantage in the issue. Specifically, political parties present an ambiguous position when their own supporters are divided in their stances on the issue.

Kyung Joon Han is Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

“For a long time, political scientists ignored the fact that parties often strategically take ambiguous positions. Based on cross-national analysis and case studies of radical-right and social democratic parties, this book provides a much-needed, encompassing reassessment of the way parties can use position blurring to increase their appeal among voters.”

Youth without Representation
The Absence of Young Adults in Parliaments, Cabinets, and Candidacies
Daniel Stockemer and Aksel Sundström

Why young people are excluded from office

Young adults—those aged 35 years or under—comprise a mere ten percent of all parliamentarians globally, and three percent of all cabinet members. Compared to their presence in the world’s population, this age group faces an underrepresentation of one to three in parliament and one to ten in cabinet. In this book, Stockemer and Sundström provide a holistic account of youths’ marginalization in legislatures, cabinets, and candidacies for office through a comparative lens. They argue that youths’ underrepresentation in political office constitutes a democratic deficit and provide ample evidence for why they think that youth must be present in politics at much higher rates.

Daniel Stockemer is Full Professor and Konrad Adenauer Research Chair in Empirical Democracy Studies in the School of Political Studies at the University of Ottawa, Canada. Aksel Sundström is Associate Professor and Senior Lecturer in the Department of Political Science at the University of Gothenburg, Sweden.
The United States and International Law
Paradoxes of Support across Contemporary Issues
Edited by Lucrecia García Iommi and Richard W. Maass

Why U.S. support for international law is so inconsistent

The United States and International Law: Paradoxes of Support across Contemporary Issues analyzes the seemingly inconsistent U.S. relationship with international law by identifying five types of state support for international law: leadership, consent, internalization, compliance, and enforcement. In addition to offering rich substantive discussions of U.S. foreign policy, their findings reveal patterns across the U.S. relationship with international law that shed light on behavior that often seems paradoxical at best, hypocritical at worst. The results help us understand why the United States engages with international law as it does, the legacies of the Trump administration, and what we should expect from the United States under the Biden administration and beyond.

Lucrecia García Iommi is Associate Professor of Politics at Fairfield University. Richard W. Maass is Associate Professor of Political Science at Old Dominion University.

Isolation and Engagement
Presidential Decision Making on China from Kennedy to Nixon
William Waltman Newmann

Presidential style and its effects on China policy

This book analyzes the successes and failures of administrations from Kennedy to Nixon as they sought to strike a balance between the personal style of the president and the need for a strong interagency structure that could systematically evaluate policy options. The narrative focuses on US decision making on China and Taiwan during the crucial era when the United States was considering moving from a policy of isolating China to a policy of engagement, culminating in Nixon’s historic 1972 trip to China.

William Waltman Newmann is Associate Professor of Political Science at Virginia Commonwealth University.

“Professor Newmann brings the reader inside the White House for an intimate portrait of America’s relationship with a key figure in world politics today. A fascinating and informative book.”

Home Field Advantage

Roots, Reelection, and Representation in the Modern Congress

Charles Hunt

Local roots and their impact on congressional campaigns, elections, and representation

Home Field Advantage demonstrates the importance of this understudied element of American congressional elections and representation in the modern era: the local, place-based roots that members of Congress have in their home districts. Charles Hunt argues that legislators’ local roots have a significant and independent impact on their campaigns, election outcomes, and more broadly on the relationship between members of the U.S. House of Representatives and their constituents. Drawing on original data, his research reveals that there is considerable variation in election outcomes, campaign spending, and constituent communication styles that are not fully explained by partisanship, incumbency, or other well-established theories of American political representation. Rather, many of these differences are the result of the depth of a legislator’s local roots that predate their time in Congress.

Charles Hunt is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Boise State University.

Democracy’s Meanings

How the Public Understands Democracy and Why It Matters

Nicholas T. Davis, Keith Gâddie, and Kirby Goidel

How do the people who make up American democracy view and judge its process?

Democracy’s Meanings challenges conventional wisdom regarding how the public thinks about and evaluates democracy. Mining both political theory and more than 75 years of public opinion data, the book argues that Americans think about democracy in ways that go beyond voting or elected representation. Instead, citizens have rich and substantive views about the material conditions that democracy should produce, which draw from their beliefs about equality, fairness, and justice.

The Repoliticization of the Welfare State
Ian P. McManus

How the Great Recession changed welfare

This book is one of the first to systematically compare welfare state politics before and after the Great Recession, arguing that a new and lasting post-crisis dynamic has emerged where political parties once again matter for social spending. At the heart of this repoliticization are intense ideological debates over market regulation, social inequality, redistribution, and the role of the state. The book analyzes social spending dynamics for 28 countries before and after the crisis. It also includes in-depth country case studies representing five distinct welfare state types: Germany, the United Kingdom, Sweden, Spain, and the Czech Republic.

Ian P. McManus is Assistant Professor of Political Science, Emerson College.

“This book makes a simple but powerful argument: Partisan conflict about the welfare state is back.” —Peter Starke, University of Southern Denmark

Architectures of Hope
Infrastructural Citizenship and Class Mobility in Brazil’s Public Housing
Moisés Kopper

Brazil’s largest-ever public housing program on the eve of the 2008 financial crisis

Architectures of Hope examines how communal idealism, electoral politics, and low-income consumer markets made first-time homeownership a reality for millions of low-income Brazilians over the last ten years. Drawing on a five-year-long ethnography among city planners, architects, street-level bureaucrats, politicians, market and bank representatives, community leaders, and past, present, and future beneficiaries, Moisés Kopper tells the story of how a group of grassroots housing activists rose from oblivion to build a model community. He explores the strategies set forth by housing activists as they waited and hoped for—and eventually secured—homeownership through Minha Casa, Minha Vida’s public-private infrastructure. By showing how these efforts coalesced in Porto Alegre, he interrogates the value systems that underlie the country’s post-neoliberal project of modern and inclusive development.

Moisés Kopper is a Postdoctoral Researcher at the Laboratoire d’Anthropologie des Mondes Contemporains.

Collecting the Now
On the Financial Side of Postwar Art History
Michael Maizels

How dealers and artists made pop art fine

Collecting the Now offers a new, in-depth look at the economic forces and institutional actors that have shaped the outlines of postwar art history, with a particular focus on American art, 1960–90. Working through four case studies, Michael Maizels illuminates how a set of dealers and patrons conditioned the iconic developments of this period: the profusions of pop art, the quixotic impossibility of land art, the dissemination of new media, and the speculation-fueled neo-expressionist painting of the 1980s.

Michael Maizels is an Affiliate with metaLAB@Harvard.

“Maizels takes us on a fast-paced journey through the rise of contemporary art—offering counterintuitive insights, dispelling myths, and revealing the economic principles of a market that is ultimately more rational than it appears.”

Owning Performance | Performing Ownership

Literary Property and the Eighteenth-Century British Stage

Jane Wessel

How playwrights, actors, and theater managers vied for control over the performance of popular plays after the passage of England’s first copyright law

Owning Performance follows the careers of some of the 18th century’s most influential playwrights, actors, and theater managers as they vied for control over the period’s most popular shows. Without protection for dramatic literary property, these figures developed creative extra-legal strategies for controlling the performance of drama—quite literally performing their ownership. Author Jane Wessel explores how playwrights and actors developed strategies for owning their works and how, in turn, theater managers appropriated these strategies, putting constant pressure on artists to innovate. Owning Performance reveals the wide-reaching effects of property law on theatrical culture, tracing a turn away from print that affected the circulation, preservation, and legacy of 18th-century drama.

Jane Wessel is Assistant Professor of English at the US Naval Academy.

Staged Readings

Contesting Class in Popular American Theater and Literature, 1835–75

Michael D’Alessandro

How popular culture helped to create class in nineteenth-century America

Staged Readings studies the social consequences of 19th-century America’s two most prevalent leisure forms. At a time when both theater and popular literature were developing at unprecedented rates, playhouses became crowded with new spectators, best-selling novels flew off the shelves, and, all the while, distinct social classes began to emerge. While the middle and upper classes were espousing conservative literary tastes and attending family matinees and operas, laborers were reading dime novels and watching downtown spectacle melodramas. As audiences traveled from the reading parlor to the playhouse, they accumulated a vital sense of social place. Through its analysis of best-selling novels, sensational melodramas, parlor theatricals, doomsday speeches, tableau vivant displays, curiosity museum exhibits, and fake volcano explosions, Staged Readings shows how culture made class in 19th-century America.

Michael D’Alessandro is Assistant Professor of English and Theater Studies at Duke University.
Magnificent Méliès
The Authorized Biography
Madeleine Malthête-Méliès, translated by Kel Pero, edited by Matthew Solomon
Biography of pioneer early filmmaker Georges Méliès, now in English
The films of Georges Méliès are landmarks in the early history of narrative filmmaking and cinematic special effects. He was a harbinger of modern aesthetics and media manipulation, and this book, written by his granddaughter, is the only one that tells his full story. The core of the biography provides detailed accounts of Méliès’ filmmaking years and his eventual marginalization by the very industry he had helped to found. Magnificent Méliès is a thoroughly researched but highly accessible book that is a crucial source for the scholar and an entertaining read for the nonspecialist.
Madeleine Malthête-Méliès was a pioneering early film researcher and historian of early cinema; she was the granddaughter of Georges Méliès. Kel Pero is an editor, writer, and translator. Matthew Solomon is Professor in the Department of Film, Television, and Media at the University of Michigan.

Méliès Boots
Footwear and Film Manufacturing in Second Industrial Revolution Paris
Matthew Solomon
Examines the work of pioneer filmmaker Georges Méliès in relationship to Second Industrial Revolution’s advances in technology, transportation, and chemistry
Before he became an influential cinematic innovator, Georges Méliès (1861–1938) was a maker of deluxe French footwear, an illusionist, and a caricaturist. Proceeding from these beginnings, Méliès Boots traces how the full trajectory of Georges Méliès’ career during the late-nineteenth and early-twentieth centuries, along with the larger cultural and historical contexts in which Méliès operated, shaped his cinematic oeuvre. By positioning Méliès in relation to the material culture of his time, Solomon demonstrates that Méliès’ work was expressive of a distinctly modern, and modernist, sensibility that appeared in France during the 1880s in the wake of the Second Industrial Revolution.
Matthew Solomon is Professor in the Department of Film, Television, and Media at the University of Michigan.
Contingent Encounters
Improvisation in Music and Everyday Life
Dan DiPiero

The relationship between improvisation in music and in everyday life

Contingent Encounters offers a sustained comparative study of improvisation as it appears between music and everyday life. Drawing on work in musicology, cultural studies, and critical improvisation studies, as well as his own performing experience, Dan DiPiero argues that comparing improvisation across domains calls into question how improvisation is typically recognized. By comparing the music of Eric Dolphy, Norwegian free improvisers, Mr. K, and the Ingrid Laubrock/Kris Davis duo with improvised activities in everyday life (such as walking, baking, working, and listening), DiPiero concludes that improvisation appears as a function of any encounter between subjects, objects, and environments. Taking seriously the claim that improvisation is the same thing as living, Contingent Encounters overturns long-standing assumptions about the aesthetic and political implications of this notoriously slippery term.

Dan DiPiero is Lecturer of Comparative Studies at the Ohio State University and an Adjunct Professor of Music History at Capital University.

Net Neutrality and the Battle for the Open Internet
Danny Kimball

How “net neutrality” became a battleground for the future of communications and culture

Though it began as a technical principle informing obscure policy debates, “net neutrality” became the flashpoint for an all-out political battle for the future of communications and culture. Net Neutrality and the Battle for the Open Internet is a critical cultural history of net neutrality that reveals how this intentionally “boring” world of internet infrastructure and regulation hides a fascinating and pivotal sphere of power, with lessons for communication and media scholars, activists, and anyone interested in technology and politics. Kimball offers a humanities-based critical theoretical approach, telling the story of how activists and millions of everyday people, online and in the streets, were able to challenge the power of the phone and cable corporations to advance equality and justice in media and technology.

Danny Kimball is Associate Professor of Communication and Media Studies at Goucher College.
The Greco-Egyptian Magical Formularies

Libraries, Books, and Individual Recipes

Edited by Christopher A. Faraone and Sofía Torallas Tovar

Essays on the magical handbooks of Greco-Roman Egypt

In Greco-Roman Egypt, recipes for magical undertakings, called magical formularies, commonly existed for love potions, curses, and attempts to best business rivals. In The Greco-Egyptian Magical Formularies: Libraries, Books, and Individual Recipes, volume editors Christopher Faraone and Sofía Torallas Tovar present a series of essays by scholars involved in a multiyear project to reedit and translate magical handbooks that were inscribed in the Roman period in the Greek or Egyptian languages. For the first time, the material remains of these papyrus rolls and codices are closely examined, revealing important information about the production of books in Egypt, their scribal culture, and the traffic in single recipes copied from them. Especially important are new insights in the historical shift from roll to codex, complicated methods of inscribing the bilingual texts, and the new realization that several of the longest handbooks are clearly compilations of shorter handbooks. The essays also reexamine the idea that these handbooks came from the personal libraries of practicing magicians or temple scriptoria, in one case suggesting that two of the handbooks had literary pretensions of a sort and were designed to be read for pleasure.

Christopher A. Faraone is Edward Olson Professor of Classics at the University of Chicago. Sofía Torallas Tovar is Professor of Classics and Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations at the University of Chicago.

Essays on Propertius
Sharon L. James, Editor

New approaches to the poetry of Propertius

The elegiac poet Propertius responds in his verse to the complex changes that Rome underwent in his lifetime, taking on topics of poetic and sexual rivalry, visual art, imperialism, colonialism, civil war, and more. These essays, by well-known scholars of Roman elegy, offer new ways of reading Propertius.

This book offers two distinguished essays by influential Propertian scholar Barbara Flaschenriem. The other contributions, offered in her memory, are by Diane Rayor, Andrew Feldherr, Ellen Greene, Lowell Bowditch, Alison Keith, and volume editor Sharon James. These essays explore Propertian didacticism, dream interpretation, visual art and formalism, sex and violence, Roman imperialism and its connection to the elegiac puella, and Propertius’ engagement, in Book 4, with Vergil’s poetry.

Confiscation or Coexistence
Egyptian Temples in the Age of Augustus
Andrew Connor

A new interpretation of the administrative restructuring of temple lands in Roman Egypt

It is generally accepted that Roman administrators, reaching Egypt in the aftermath of Augustus’ annexation, confiscated the land and other property owned by Egyptian temples. It is further accepted that this confiscation doomed the temples by removing their economic support and making them subservient to the Roman state, and that this then led to the collapse of Egyptian religion. In his new monograph, Andrew Connor takes issue with both claims. Connor offers a fundamentally revised interpretation of the key documents, relating these events and exploring these papyri through their historical, intellectual, and linguistic contexts, alongside a number of other important texts bearing on the relationship between the temples and the Roman state.

To further this commitment, the Press is transitioning to an open access monograph model termed “Fund to Mission.” This name recognizes the role of open access in fulfilling the inherent mission of our Press and our research university, and the model is part of our goal of moving toward a more open, sustainable infrastructure for the humanities and social sciences for all.

With Fund to Mission, UMP aims to convert at least 75% of its frontlist monographs to open access by the end of 2023, without any author ever having to pay. The Press is working to build a sustainable model by achieving stable funding for this monograph program from three sources: annual funding from the library community, recurring funds from the University of Michigan, and other funder payments. To date, the Press has received support from libraries and consortia as well as additional funding from the Provost at U-M.

Guardians of Michigan
Architectural Sculpture of the Pleasant Peninsulas
Jeff Morrison

Guardians of Michigan profiles the extraordinary architectural sculpture found in both the pleasant peninsulas of the Great Lakes State. Author Jeff Morrison spent years exploring Michigan’s largest cities and smallest towns, using telephoto photography to capture the sculptural details hidden from the naked eye, and researching the beautiful historic architecture he encountered. Organized alphabetically by city, each section documents the history and design of an individual building, accompanied by beautiful photos of the building and its unique ornamentation.

The buildings profiled in Guardians of Michigan range from county courthouses, churches, and government buildings constructed during the 1800s, to skyscrapers with intricate sculptural decoration too far above street level for passersby to see. As a result, the book highlights examples of Gothic, Romanesque Revival, Beaux Arts, as well as Art Deco and Art Moderne. Guardians of Michigan is a loving tribute to the architecture of the state, preserving forgotten stories and beautiful buildings for all readers to enjoy.

Jeff Morrison is a historian and photographer whose first book, Guardians of Detroit: Architectural Sculpture in the Motor City, was named a 2020 Michigan Notable Book and received the 2020 Midwest Book Award.

Rouge River Revived
How People Are Bringing Their River Back to Life
Edited by John H. Hartig and Jim Graham
Foreword by William Clay Ford, Jr.

The Rouge River is a mostly urbanized watershed of about 500 square miles populated by nearly 1.4 million people. While not geographically large, the river has played an outsized role in the history of southeast Michigan, most famously housing Ford’s massive Rouge Factory, designed by architect Albert Kahn and later memorialized in Diego Rivera’s renowned “Detroit Industry” murals. In recent decades, the story of the Rouge River has also been one of grassroots environmental activism. After pollution from the Ford complex and neighboring factories literally caused the river to catch on fire in 1969, community groups launched a Herculean effort to restore and protect the watershed. Today the Rouge stands as one of the most successful examples of urban river revival in the country.

Rouge River Revived describes the river’s history from pre-European times into the 21st century. Chapters cover topics such as Native American life on the Rouge; indigenous flora and fauna over time; the river’s role in the founding of local cities; its key involvement in Detroit’s urban development and intensive industrialization; and the dramatic clean-up arising from citizen concern and activism. This book is not only a history of the environment of the Rouge River, but also of the complex and evolving relationship between humans and natural spaces.

John Hartig serves as a Visiting Scholar at the University of Windsor’s Great Lakes Institute for Environmental Research, as the Great Lakes Science-Policy Advisor to the International Association for Great Lakes Research, and as a member of the Board of Directors of the Detroit Riverfront Conservancy.

Jim Graham is an award-winning journalist for the Detroit News and the former Executive Director of Friends of the Rouge.

The Evolution of Settlement Systems in the Region of Vohémar, Northeast Madagascar

Henry T. Wright

On the northeast coast of Madagascar, near the town of Vohémar, is a large cemetery dating to the fourteenth century. During World War II, French troops excavated the site but left no comprehensive report. University of Michigan archaeologist Henry T. Wright led an intensive archaeological survey in the region, hoping to find evidence of earlier settlements. In four seasons, the researchers found evidence of several settlements dating to different periods. In this study, Wright presents the survey results in detail, including the evidence for settlements as well as illustrations of the ceramics and stone tools.

Archaeological Investigations in a Northern Albanian Province: Results of the Projekti Arkeologjik i Shkodrës (PASH)

Volume One: Survey and Excavation Results / Volume Two: Artifacts and Artifact Analysis

Michael L. Galaty and Lorenc Bejko, editors

This research report, focused on the province of Shkodër, is based on five years of field and laboratory work and is the first synthetic archaeological treatment of this region. The results of the Projekti Arkeologjik i Shkodrës (or PASH) are presented here in two volumes. Volume 1 includes geological context, a literature review, historical background, and reports on the regional survey and test excavations at three settlements and three tumuli. In Volume 2, the authors describe the artifacts recovered through survey and excavation. These two volumes place northern Albania—and the Shkodër Province in particular—at the forefront of archaeological research in the Balkans.
